

Church of South India

History:

The Church of South India was inaugurated in 1947, after 30 years of union negotiations between the South India United Church, the Anglican dioceses in South India and the South Indian districts of the Methodist Church. In the 1990s, a small number of Baptist and Pentecostal churches also joined the unions in India as a further step towards unity. Discussions about the merging of South India's Protestant denominations began at a 1919 conference at Tranquebar and by the independence of India in 1947, the union was achieved and the CSI officially established

Activities:

The primary concerns of the church are evangelism and social justice. Major programs and activities include evangelism, stewardship, healing and educational ministries, technical and vocational training, rural and urban development, Christian nurture of the congregation, theological education and training of pastors.

The Church of South India currently has over 3.8 million members.
The Moderator is The Most Rev Dr J W Gladstone
